

PLANNING SHEET

Ahoy there ya scallywag seadogs. You are a pirate, navigating around the glistening waters and luxurious sands of the Caribbean. Those King-loving Brits that 'colonized' the beautiful islands blasted cannonballs through the hull of your beloved ship. Your ship was destroyed but you managed to flee from the redcoats. All your pirating has been unsuccessful at procuring a new vessel and you have been on land ever since. During this time, you have been stealing food and weapons, breaking into houses, sleeping rough and causing chaos amongst the locals as you recruit a new crew for your next adventure. Finally, with your rascally crew in toe, you manage to 'commandeer' one of His Majesty's finest ships. As you set sail blockade of military vessels prevent your departure. They arrest you and charge you with stealing your ship on top of the other crimes committed while on land. The Governor sentences you to be hanged until dead.

Your task is to write a persuasive speech, convincing the Governor to release you and spare your life.
